

Ms. Gioia Venturini is currently Director and Vice-President for International Cooperation and Public Affairs in R&T and Innovation at SAFRAN (since 2017, Saclay, France). Prior to this, she served as Senior Vice-President for Europe, Russia, CIS, and Turkey at SAFRAN Headquarters (2012–2017, Paris).

She has also held key roles at ARIANESPACE as Director of Governmental and Commercial Sales for Europe and Africa, and at AIRBUS (formerly EADS) Headquarters as Senior Manager for Europe and Africa, where she was also General Secretary of the EuroMALE (UAV platform) Steering Committee.

Earlier in her career, she worked at CEIS in Paris as Consultant and Deputy Director for Business Development in the aerospace, defense, and energy sectors, and at LEONARDO (formerly FINMECCANICA) in Rome as Project Manager within the International Affairs Department.

She is also a member of EASN Association's Stakeholders Advisory Board, member of Luchtvaart in Transitie International Advisory Council, and member of Elles Bougent association, an organization that promotes gender equality in technical sectors and encourages women and young girls to embrace technical careers.

She holds a Master's degree from ENA (École Nationale d'Administration) and a Master in Public Administration (MPA), as well as a Master's degree in International Relations and Political Economy from Sciences Po Paris. She also earned a Specialized Master's degree in International Management from Rennes I University and a degree in Simultaneous Interpretation and Technical-Scientific Translation from SSIT in Milan. She completed specialization studies in Science, Technology and Society at CNAM (Paris). She also has an Executive PhD in Public Affairs at Paris-Dauphine University, focusing on the use of Artificial Intelligence in the French Gendarmerie.